There was a salt marsh that bounded part of the mill-pond on the edge of which at high water, we used to stand to fish for minnows. By much trampling, we had made it a mere quagmire.

My proposal was to build a wharf there fit for us to stand upon, and I showed my comrades a large heap of stones, which were intended for a new house near the marsh, which would very well suit our purpose. Accordingly, in the evening when the workers were gone, I assembled a number of playfellows, and working with them diligently like so many emmets, sometimes two or three to a stone, we brought them all away and built our little wharf. The next morning the workmen were surprised at missing the stones, which were found in our wharf. An inquiry was made after the removers; we were discovered and complained about; several of us were corrected by our fathers; and though I pleaded about the usefulness of the work mine convinced me that nothing was useful which was not honest.

I still marvel I didn't drop stone-cold dead from embarrassment during my first solo travel experience. As a 20-year-old, I booked a spontaneous trip to Darwin in Australia's Northern Territory. I didn't want to go alone, but none of my friends had the time or money to go with me.

Everything went wrong from the start. Poor planning landed me in the only available room in town, a backpacker bunk room occupied by two German men who didn't speak English. On a guided tour of Kakadu National Park, I fell for every prank my Australian guide pulled.

(Eventually he stopped baiting me. My gullibility made it "easier than tackling a turtle," he said.) And I won't get into how I won a wet T-shirt contest I never entered, thanks to a bad wardrobe choice.

I am the reigning world heavyweight champion of beating myself up, and each mistake made me more self-conscious. I felt like Nancy No-Mates when I requested a table for one. I was certain everyone was watching me, wondering if I was recently jilted, or simply friendless.

Q.5 In the following number-pairs, the second number is obtained by performing certain mathematical operations on the first number. Which numbers should replace X and Y so that the pattern followed by the two numbers on the left side of :: is the same as that on the right side of :: ?

(NOTE: Operations should be performed on the whole numbers, without breaking down the numbers into its constituent digits. E.g. 13 – Operations on 13 such as adding/subtracting/multiplying etc. to 13 can be performed. Breaking down 13 into 1 and 3 and then performing mathematical operations on 1 and 3 is not allowed.)

X : 289 :: 23 : Y

- Ans
- 1. X = 17, Y = 441
  - 2. X = 25, Y = 196
  - 3. X = 22, Y = 225
  - 4. X = 27, Y = 169
